

FRANK R. BRADY IS THE NOMINEE

Young Republican Attorney of Crothersville, is Named For Prosecutor at Scottsburg.

CONVENTION THIS AFTERNOON

Nomination is Accepted.—A Great Crowd in Scottsburg to Hear Senator Beveridge Speak.

The Republicans of Jackson and Scott counties met in delegate convention at Scottsburg this afternoon to nominate a candidate for prosecutor for the 40th judicial district.

The convention which was well attended by James Mount, chairman of the Scott county Republican committee.

E. A. Remy, of Seymour, was elected permanent chairman and W. M. Faulkner of Scottsburg, secretary. When nominations were called for John H. Conner, of Seymour, placed in nomination Frank Brady, of Crothersville, and he was elected by acclamation.

In a short speech he accepted the nomination and gave his pledge that he would make an active, earnest fight for election. There is a general feeling among Republicans that there is a good chance to elect a prosecutor this year and it is understood that Mr. Brady will make a thorough canvass of the two counties.

He is well known in both Scott and Jackson and is a young man of sterling qualities, a good lawyer and thoroughly qualified for the office of prosecutor.

Senator Beveridge spoke in Scottsburg this afternoon and there was a great crowd there to hear him. Delegations from all over the county and from surrounding towns were there. The business houses were lavishly decorated with flags and bunting for the occasion. The speakers' stand was decorated with pictures of Taft, Roosevelt and Beveridge. Senator Beveridge was late in arriving and a band concert was given after dinner. Ex-Congressman Landis, of Logansport, also spoke. Senator Beveridge, who is speaking twice a day, has been having trouble with his throat, making necessary the shortening of his speeches. He will be in Columbus tonight and many Seymour people will hear him there.

Studio Reopened.

Mrs. Anna Barlow and Miss Mary Crowe are at home from Bay View and today reopened the Barlow studio on Indianapolis avenue and are better prepared than ever to do high class work. The studio has been closed since June, the proprietors spending the summer at Bay View where they conducted one of the leading studios at that popular summer resort. They had a very incessant season and had as their patrons some of the notables of the country. Among them was Madam Schumann-Heineke, who has a world wide reputation as a musician. Her husband was also a patron and they had pictures taken of their piano. Mrs. Barlow and Miss Crowe have established quite a reputation for their work at Bay View.

Series "A" Postponed.

The length of time which has been required to mature Series F of the Cooperative Building and Loan Association stock, and the prospect that future series may overrun the usual length of time, has made it advisable in the judgment of the directors, to have a thorough investigation of the books and accounts of the Association made by an expert building and loan accountant, to determine the exact condition of the Association and the value of the various series outstanding. Pending this examination the new series "A" of this stock which was to have started Monday, October 2, will not be opened until the result of this investigation is known. The books of the Association show that it is entirely solvent and the business of the series already outstanding will be continued as heretofore.

Expected Next Week.

It was reported that outside representatives of the two electric light companies and others would be here today and the future of the light question in Seymour would be definitely settled. They failed to come however, but will probably be here next week.

THE PROGRAM FOR REUNION

Arrangements Are Completed For the Gathering of Fourth District Veterans at Columbus.

PROMINENT MEN TO SPEAK

Many Old Soldiers of Seymour and Jackson County Will Attend Regimental Reunions.

Great preparations are being made for the rally and reunion of Fourth district civil war veterans which will be held at Columbus October 12. Many of the old soldiers of Jackson county are planning to attend. The local Grand Army Post will participate in the parade. About twenty-five of the members have ordered new uniforms and will receive them in time for the reunion.

The program for the day has been finally arranged. In the forenoon there will be an informal reception for the veterans and assignment to quarters. In the afternoon there will be a general meeting to transact the business of the district. At night there will be a parade preceding the camp fire. The program for the latter was completed this week and is as follows:

Music—Columbus Concert Band. Welcome Address—Mayor Charles S. Baraby.

Response—Col. J. R. Fesler, Asst. Adjt. Gen. G. A. R. Song—Quartette.

Address—Congressman Lincoln Dixon.

Vocal Solo—"Star Spangled Banner," Mrs. W. A. Stevens.

Address—Department Commander Asbury.

Song—Quartette.

Music—Columbus Concert Band. Informal talks by veterans.

Taps.

In the parade the Spanish American war veterans will act as an escort for the old soldiers.

In addition to this district meeting eleven regiments—the Sixth, Twelfth, Seventeenth, Twenty-second, Twenty-fifth, Twenty-seventh, Sixty-seventh, Ninety-third, One Hundred and Twentieth, One Hundred and Forty-fifth, Tenth Cavalry and all artillerymen will hold reunions.

The 17th, 22nd, 27th and 67th and the 10th cavalry have survivors in Jackson county. Columbus will give the veterans a cordial reception and they are also invited to bring their families.

The city is preparing to decorate liberally for the occasion.

Will Give Demonstration.

M. W. Richards, of the Purdue Experimental station, was here yesterday evening and with Supt. Linke, of the city schools, Judge Shea and C. S. Mercer, went out to the Stanfield orchard. Mr. Richards expects to arrange for a public demonstration at this orchard about Oct. 26 of the proper way to care for orchards to insure a good crop. The success made of the Stanfield orchard under the direction of the Purdue representatives has attracted general attention to the possibilities of profitable apple growing in this section.

Card of Thanks.

We are thankful to our friends and neighbors for their kindness through the sickness and death of our baby, Helen Ruth. Also for their beautiful floral offerings, and especially to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Voss for their kindness, and the minister for his words of comfort. We shall ever hold them all in kind remembrance. SOUTHERN INDIANA

Railway Properties May Be Taken Over at Sale by The Frisco.

It is rumored again in railroad circles that several railroad companies are contemplating the purchase of the Southern Indiana properties which will be offered at public auction in Terre Haute on November 3rd.

One dispatch has it that the Chicago banks which control the S. I. properties are figuring with the Frisco system and that company may take over the Walsh road, and extend the line from Black Hawk to Indianapolis.

The Walsh railroad properties, including the Chicago Southern, a freight road running from Chicago to Terre Haute and the Southern Indiana, have been in charge of the First Trust company of Chicago. The new development in the situation is the probability that the Frisco may be successful bidders for the properties.

The Monon railroad is also said to have its heart set on the Southern Indiana as a feeder for its lines and upon the right of way into Indianapolis for an extension which would be of great benefit to the Monon, giving it, and other lines, including the L. & N., a more direct entrance into Indianapolis with the projected extension.

Thus those in touch with the Chicago situation in relation to the roads believe whether the lines will be sold as a system or the Southern Indiana goes either to the Frisco or Monon, Indianapolis will have another railroad from the South, with a strong probability of an extension of the E. & I. into Indianapolis and Evansville in case the property should pass into the hands of the Frisco interests.

Those familiar with the situation think the most probable purchaser of the rich little Southern Indiana is the Frisco, which operates the E. & T. H. and the E. & I. in southern Indiana now. The Frisco gets into Chicago but not in Indianapolis, the E. & I. running from Evansville to Terre Haute. With an extension along the Wabash right of way from Saline City on the E. & I. to Indianapolis, the Frisco would have a much coveted entrance into Indianapolis.

To Pass Through Seymour.

Senator Beveridge who spoke at Scottsburg this afternoon, will pass through Seymour this evening on his way to Columbus where he speaks tonight.

HIGH SCHOOL WILL SOON BE COMPLETED

Contractors Believe That Structure Will Be Ready For Occupancy By December 1.

CONTRACTORS ARE PLEASED

Board of Trustees Decide to Complete Gymnasium, Which Will Be Equipped For Classes.

The contractors who are erecting the new high school believe that they will be able to complete the building by the middle of November. There is yet a large amount of work to be done on the building, but with the force of men employed this should progress rapidly.

The building is a very handsome structure and the contractors are well pleased with the manner in which it has been constructed and also with the progress which has been made. The work was delayed several weeks soon after the old building was torn down, and later the workmen were idle several days as the contractors were unable to get the necessary materials for the foundation. As soon as these arrived, however, but little time has been lost and the school will probably be completed a few days before the expiration of the contract time.

The school board has decided to complete the gymnasium, and it will be ready for the use of the pupils a short time after the school is opened. At first it was feared that this department could not be finished as the building cost considerably more than was anticipated and there would not be sufficient money for this purpose. The gymnasium will probably not be as fully equipped as desired for several months, but it will be furnished with such apparatus that the gymnastic classes will be conducted in the new department.

The building will fully be equipped with electric lights and this will be a great convenience to the teachers who are required to remain at the building after school hours. The assembly room will be open for lectures and concerts, and already several good lecturers and concerts have been engaged for the coming winter. These should net a good revenue for the school building, as the only expense would be for the entertainers.

It may be several weeks after the contractors complete their work before the building will be ready for occupancy, as there is much work to be done about the various rooms. The desks and chairs must be placed in position, and Superintendent Linke with a committee of the teachers is expected at the building for the purpose of locating the seats today. It is thought the building will open for the reception of people by December 1.

Country Fair. Every feature of a typical rural celebration was presented at the Country Fair which was given Friday evening by the September social committee of the Country Club. The dancing pavilion was arranged with a number of booths, and in the exhibit department could be seen prize pumpkins, carrots, tomatoes, and various kinds of vegetables. The housewives were given an opportunity to show their skill in culinary art and had on display all kinds of jellies, preserves and pickles. After the prizes had been awarded on the various entries, the exhibits were sold at auction to the fair visitors.

Lunch and refreshment stands were also provided, and those present were given an opportunity to purchase their suppers at the "fair." This most unique event was one of the most successful that has been given at the Country Club, and the members of the September committee have been justly highly commended upon the success.

ODD FELLOWS Lodge at Medora Organized Friday Night. After a lapse of sixteen years Medora again has an Odd Fellows lodge. It was instituted in Tierney's hall last night under the direction of Oren Swails, of Seymour, the district deputy grand master. The lodge starts with eight charter members: H. C. McCowan, Moody Massena, J. L. Richards, Howard Smith, M. F. Davis, Albert E. Shortridge, Frank B. Booker and Everett Crowe, all of whom had belonged to I. O. O. F. lodges elsewhere and had taken their cards out to organize the Medora lodge. A class of new members is being organized and it is expected that it will number at least twenty. When they are initiated the Mitchell, Brownstown and Seymour lodges will be invited to give the work. The elective officers of the new lodge who were installed last night by Deputy Grand Master Swartz, assisted by members of the Brownstown lodge, were: Noble Grand, H. C. McCowan; Vice Grand, Moody Massena; Secretary, J. L. Richards; Treasurer, Howard M. Smith. The minor officers will be filled later. Medora's first Odd Fellows lodge was organized in 1870. In 1884 a fire destroyed the lodge hall and part of the paraphernalia and as the lodge was not strong it was decided to surrender the charter. The new lodge is in some respects a revival of the old as it takes the old number, 349, and receives the original charter. None of the members of the old organization are in the new. William Shortridge, a well known citizen of Medora, who died last week, was the secretary of the first lodge and was very much interested in the new organization. Had he lived he would have become one of its charter members.

SPRUNG A SURPRISE IN OSTERMAN CASE

Defense Did Not Know Prose- cution Had Little Red Book.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—The "little red book," a hitherto mysterious document, upon whose pages Henry C. Ostermann, self-confessed grafter, kept a private account of the hundreds of thousands of dollars car repair graft money he claims to have paid Illinois Central road officers to keep things running smoothly, will be offered in evidence at the hearing in Judge Bruggemeyer's court the first of the week. It was not known by the defense that Attorney Walter L. Fisher, for the prosecution, had possession of the private "little red book."

It is said to have been impounded a few days previous to Ostermann's confession of guilt and to have been the club which forced him to become a willing witness. In this "little red book" are recorded the names of the railroad officers who were paid money.

"Every time Ostermann was 'held up' by the Illinois Central officers he recorded it in his private graft book," said Attorney Fisher. "The 'little red book' will clean up the details of the graft transactions."

SELECTING SEED CORN.

Better Run Risk of Frost Than Pick
the Ears Too Early.

The first step toward better seed corn for next year must be taken in the fall by selecting the seed ears from the stalks in the field. The corn should be allowed to mature well on the stalk. By selecting the earliest maturing ears and picking them from the stalk as soon as the husks begin to turn yellow, which is a common practice, earliness is secured at the expense of vitality, writes Professor Moore of the University of Wisconsin in the American Agriculturist.

A slight frost will not injure corn if it is well matured, and it is better to run the risk of a frost than to pick the ears too early. The latter part of the growing season seems to improve the vitality of the corn greatly.

Care should be taken in picking seed to secure ears which are attached to the stalk about three feet above the ground. Those ears which grow either very high or very low upon the stalk should be rejected, as they are undesirable, having characteristics which we do not desire. For the same reason we should avoid selecting ears with very short or long shanks or from deformed stalks.

Go into the field after the husks on the ears have turned yellow and select the well formed ears from good stalks. Put them in sacks or baskets and bring them to the side of the field and husk. It is well to follow definite rows in securing seed corn, otherwise a large number of good ears are missed. After the corn is husked many ears will be found imperfect and should be discarded. Only those ears should be retained for curing for seed that are of good form. Seed corn should be put into the proper place for curing the same day that it is taken from the field.

Diversified farming and crop rotation are the best antidotes for

HARD FIGHT AHEAD.

Vigorous Measures Needed to Save Country's Bean Crops From Disease.

We are beginning to see signs of anthracnose appearing in this country, and the disease will have to be fought hammer and tongs to keep it within control, says Field and Farm of Denver. The cut shows the appearance of the fungus. When the disease reaches this stage bordeaux mixture has been effective in downing it in the west. We have the advantage of a dry climate not only in growing beans, but in fighting the diseases which attack the crop. Nearly every one is familiar with the spotted appearance of snap beans and especially of the wax podded varieties.

BEANS AFFECTED WITH ANTHRACNOSE.
[From Field and Farm, Denver.]

Practically all parts of the bean plant except the roots are subject to attack. The most common indication of the presence of the disease is the occurrence of brown or black sunken areas on the stems, leaves and pods. They may also appear on the seed leaves and stems of the plant soon after appearing above ground and cause considerable losses through a reduction in the stand.

On the older plants the attack is most serious on the larger veins of the leaves, and the leaf may be wholly destroyed or its efficiency greatly reduced. From the stems and leaves the fungus spreads to the pods.

Hog Cholera Preventive.

The bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture, gives the following recipe for hog cholera, which is claimed by many who have tried it to be invaluable in warding off disease: One part wood charcoal, one part sulphur, two parts sodium chloride (salt), two parts sodium bicarbonate (soda), two parts sodium hyposulphite, one part antimony sulphate, one part antimony sulphate. Pulverize and mix thoroughly. Dose, one tablespoonful for each 200 pounds weight of hogs once a day.

Ingredients of Best Fertilizers.

The highest agricultural value in fertilizers is found in those that are manufactured mainly from animal matter, such as animal bone, dried blood, animal tankage, nitrate of soda and high grade potash salts.

The TRIUMPH Air Blast

Is the latest and greatest invention for producing heat from soft coal. Practically all fuel can be turned into heat and utilized in the room—no waste of gases, no waste of soot, no waste by having ashes banked against the fire pot. When we say we can save you one-third of your fuel bill is putting it mildly. The construction of the fire pot is so arranged that its radiation surface is double that of any other soft coal stove made. It is the only fire pot where it is absolutely impossible for ashes to bank against; the only fire pot where hot air has a complete circulation from top to bottom. The perfect fitting ash pit door, the ball bearing grate, the solid cast body are all features worth your while to consider in buying a stove. We will be glad to demonstrate the construction of the Triumph Air Blast and prove up what we say.

Wisconsin Produces One Weighing 4,000 Pounds For Exhibition.

The largest cheese ever made has been constructed on a flat car at the John L. Jaquet cold storage plant in Appleton, Wis., for exhibition at the national dairy show at the Coliseum in Chicago.

The cheese weighs 4,000 pounds, and it took about 50,000 pounds of milk to produce it. That means all the milk for one day from 2,100 of the best dairy cows in Outagamie county and the entire output from 250 dairies in the county for that day.

From 400 to 500 men were required to do the milking, but the entire cheese was made in one day by N. Simon of Neenah, assisted by six expert cheese-makers and six helpers.

It cost over $800 to produce the big cheese, which will be valued at from $1,000 to $1,200. After the exhibition in Chicago the cheese will be shipped to New York for exhibition and then will be sold and cut.

VIRGINIA HARNED

Actress Who Is Seeking Divorce
From E. H. Sothorn.

Reno, Nev., Oct. 1.—Suit for divorce has been begun here by Virginia Harned Sothorn against Edward H. Sothorn, the actor. Failure to provide and desertion for over a year are the causes of complaint. She declares Sothorn has failed to contribute to her support since Dec. 13, 1906.

CARSON CITY LID IS CLAMPED ON TIGHT

For First Time in Its History Gambling Is Barred.

Carson City, Nev., Oct. 1.—For the first time in fifty years all the doors of the gambling houses in this city have been barred by the law. Under the recent action of the Nevada legislature gambling is prohibited on and after Oct. 1. Despite traditions, influence, argument and politics, the law stands and the old-line gamblers have bowed before it.

The wheels that have spun since the days of the characters of Bret Harte and Mark Twain are still and the faro tables have been stored away. Gambling is dead and Carson City, where fortunes have shifted on the turn of a card, is "closed." A decision rendered by Attorney General Stoddard places whist, bridge whist, five hundred, solo, and all other card games played for money, property or the representative value, under the ban. Slot machines are banished.

DIDN'T BLUFF HIM

Youthful Bank Clerk Not Scared by Robber's Gun.

McClelland, Ia., Oct. 1.—Instead of complying with the demand of an armed bandit for cash, Walter Jollas, sixteen years old, a clerk in the McClelland Savings bank, reached under the counter, pulled out a big shooter and chased the highwayman down the street.

In the pistol duel which followed between the two, the robber was shot through the arm by Jollas. A posse of citizens joined in the chase and the fugitive was captured. He was identified as Tom Kirby of Oakland, Ia.

Rounded Up the Gang.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 1.—The three months' search for the gang of men who are alleged to have assaulted Edward Fraser in Buffalo, and after cutting off his left ear, to have sent it with a threatening letter to the president of the Pittsburgh Steamship company at Cleveland, has ended here with the arrest of Michael Ryan, alias Reilly. Three others of the alleged gang were arrested in New York a couple of weeks ago.

FIGHTING PARK ASSESSMENTS

Indianapolis Residents Bitterly Oppose New Law.

SAY IT'S UNCONSTITUTIONAL

With This Contentment Against Law of 1909 Giving Indianapolis Park Board Extraordinary Power to Levy Taxes, the People of That City Have United in an Effort to Have the Objectionable Law Cast in the Discard.

Indianapolis, Oct. 1.—A case to test the right of the city to levy assessments for improvements of boulevards has been filed by owners of property in the east park district. The action was filed by attorneys employed by a committee appointed at a meeting of property owners who are objecting to the assessment. The constitutionality of the act of 1909, giving the city the right to proceed by assessing an entire park district is denied in the suit, which is one to quiet title as against the city, the park board and the county treasurer.

It is contended that the statute is contrary to the constitution of the United States, in that it takes property without due process of law, as authority is given for making assessments on land owners without giving the property owner the right to be heard, and because the assessments are made on the valuation of the lands for taxation, and not with regard to actual benefits accruing to the property. Among the many objections to its constitutionality under the Indiana constitution are that it does not provide for uniform and equal taxation on all property within the taxing district; that it provides only for taxing lands, and not improvements and personal property; that the act does not prescribe such regulations as insure just valuation for assessment purposes; that it is a special tax on property for a public use, because the law provides for the purchase of property by the city with funds raised by assessment on only a part of the property within the city, whereas such lands being for the use of the whole city, should be paid for by general taxation.

TRIAL IN PROGRESS

Terre Haute Negro Charged With Killing Detective.

Terre Haute, Ind., Oct. 1.—A jury has been obtained for the trial of William McGowan, colored, for the murder of Detective George Lintz. Lintz surprised two men who were ransacking the Elks' home. He was shot and died the next day, but not until he had positively identified McGowan. Detectives went to McGowan's home and found him in bed asleep. McGowan, who had been employed at the home, denied his guilt. The day of the shooting a negro named L. G. Riley was taken to police headquarters, questioned, and then released. He left the city almost immediately. He was employed at the home and left there an hour before Lintz was shot. A letter bearing the initials "L. G. R." is in the possession of the defense. It expresses regret over McGowan's predicament and declares that he is innocent of the crime. An effort will be made to get the letter before the jury.

Trainmen Held Responsible.

Terre Haute, Ind., Oct. 1.—Coroner Leavitt held Engineer O. H. Fox and Conductor Ray Barlow responsible for the collision on the Southern Indiana, when Engineer Cornutt of a passenger train, and Car Repairer Burkebile, of a work train, were killed. Both men admitted that they had forgotten all about the passenger train.

Father Accidentally Kills Son.

Evansville, Ind., Oct. 1.—James Harris accidentally shot and killed his five-year-old son, near Newtonville, Spencer county. In taking his shot out of the house to kill a chicken hawk that lighted in a tree near by, it was discharged and the boy, who was sitting in the doorway, had his entire lower jaw blown away.

Want Soldiers' Monument.

Princeton, Ind., Oct. 1.—Thirty petitions containing 4,000 names and asking the establishment of a soldiers' monument in the courthouse square, have been filed with the county commissioners. An appropriation of $25,000 will be urged.

FOLDING WORKBENCH.

Here Is One That Does Away With Objections to Ordinary Kind.

In the tool house or stable there is always a need at times for a workbench, with a safe place to keep the tools needed for any repair jobs that may be needed. This is greatly needed many times in the year, but when not in use is, if stationary, often in the way.

By hinging the table or top of bench to the studding, as shown in illustration, it may be folded up against the wall, where it is held by hooks, entirely out of the way and ready for use in a moment's time. When lowered the legs, which are hinged to the top, let down to the floor, and the hinges against board on studding hold bench firmly.

WORKBENCH AGAINST WALL.
[From Orange Judd Farmer.]

The space behind the top is an excellent place to keep all the small tools, as boards may be placed between studding at top and bottom, thus making it a tight box when top is raised, and when lowered your tools are all within easy reach just where you want them.—Orange Judd Farmer.

MELONS ALL YEAR ROUND.

Delicious Fruit Can Be Produced by Cultivation Under Glass.

In the summer melons are plentiful on the market, but few there are who know the delicious flavor, not to mention size, of a fully developed and well ripened fruit grown under glass. Nor is the season of such fruit limited, for melons can be produced all the year around. During the summer they can be produced in fourteen weeks from time of sowing, winter months taking a few weeks longer. To keep up a steady supply four small houses must be devoted to them. These must have adequate pipe heat to maintain the temperature through the cold weather and also to furnish bottom heat for the plants. Raised benches with pipes underneath answer both purposes well.

When sowing the seed use a good open compost and place very lightly in three inch pots, inserting one seed in each pot and water in. Place the whole in a house having a temperature of 70 to 75 degrees night and cover with paper to maintain the moisture. Good seed should germinate in about four days. When seedlings are through prepare bed for permanent planting. Good, heavy loam with old lime rubble mixed into it is all they require. Cover bottom of bench with sod, adding more with lime rubble and ramming as firm as possible until the whole is four inches thick. Mix more of same compost and also add a little charcoal for the mounds. These should be placed on the bed twenty inches apart and the seedlings planted in. Maintain a night temperature of 70 to 75 degrees and syringe twice daily. Take one shoot up until the plants are three-quarters up trellis and then stop.

Laterals will now appear bearing female flowers. Stop these one leaf beyond the flower. If possible three or four of these should be fertilized the same day to insure an even crop. As the fruit swells it will need support. Nets made for the purpose should be used. During the time the fruit is swelling the plants will take lots of water and feed, which can be given in the form of light top dressing and quick acting manures.

As soon as fruit shows signs of ripening cease syringing and keep a drier atmosphere and give all air possible. Quality is usually to be preferred to size, especially as medium sized fruit is easier to serve on table, being cut through and cracked ice placed in center.

Scarlet fleshed varieties usually are of best flavor, but there are good green and white fleshed varieties.—Horticulture.

The cost of two battleships would pay for four good experiment stations and a section of land for each, not only in one state, but in every state of the Union.

Dairy Doings.

Whitewash the stable occasionally. It is a short task if you have a whitewash machine, and it keeps everything sweet and clean.

A nervous cow is preferable to a stolid one. The chances are that she will give more and better milk than her dull, mopey sister.

It is impossible to tell the profitable cows from the unprofitable animals unless you test your milk. The quantity of milk is not enough. The butter fat must be considered.

Every farmer cannot have a prize winning herd, but he can have a few prize winning animals. The number of good animals can be gradually increased until the entire herd is good.

The dairyman should always be ready for any emergency that arises. With her first calf the young cow often has trouble. Caked udder or whatever the trouble may be should be carefully looked after.

The World-Renowned and Only Absolute Smoke Consuming Stove on Earth

THE WONDER OF THE AGE

THE HOT BLAST
AIR-TIGHT

FLORENCE

PATENTED JUNE 13, 1899

Patent Sustained by U. S. Circuit Court, July 5, 1905. Patent Sustained by U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, March 6, 1906.

Beware of Imitations and unscrupulous people who claim to have a stove like or just as good as the Florence. Do not be deceived by such false claims and find it out when too late. Examine the Florence carefully before you buy.

NO SMOKE! NO SOOT! NO DIRT! NO CLINKERS!
EVERYTHING IS CONSUMED.

At the End of a Season's Use With Soft Coal, There Will Be No Soot in the Pipe or Flue

THE ZENITH OF STOVE PERFECTION.

The only jointless leg bottom and base with full radiation and large ash pan that is on the market or has ever been made in the history of the stove industry.

The jointless leg bottom and base makes the stove air-tight below the grate, which is the only true fire keeping principle.

It will be as good a fire keeper twenty years hence as it is today.

The Hot Blast Air-Tight Florence will heat twice the space that can be heated by any other stove on earth at one-half the cost.

The only perfect floor heater that is or has ever been made.

All features are patented and no stove manufacturer, dealer or user can copy or use same for seventeen years from date of patent without incurring liability for an action for damages.

If the FLORENCE is operated according to directions:

The No. 21 will heat 1 small room all winter with 2 tons of slack or lump coal.
The No. 49 or No. 23 will heat 2 or 3 small rooms all winter with 2 tons of slack or lump coal.
The No. 51 or No. 25 will heat 3 or 4 rooms all winter with 3 tons of slack or lump coal.
The No. 53 or No. 27 will heat 5 rooms all winter with 4 tons of slack or lump coal.
The No. 55 will heat a large store or school room with 6 tons of slack or lump coal. For a church, less coal will be required.
Will burn a ton of less of hard coal than a hard coal Base Burner of the same size and heat twice the space.

VEILED IN GLOOM

Indiana Democratic Managers Recognize Beveridge's Popularity.

[Special Correspondence.]

Indianapolis, Oct. 1.—There has been more than the usual interest in the first week of the Republican speaking campaign. The Republicans have been deeply interested in the reception given to Senator Beveridge by Indiana voters. It may be said the Democrats have been even more deeply concerned over this important matter. As a result of the first week's work, the Republicans are pleased beyond measure and the Democratic managers are veiled in their own gloom. Senator Beveridge's first meeting, in Indianapolis, was one of the best openings ever seen in Indiana. His speech on that occasion gave him forward place among the nation's great. This is the verdict given in letters and telegrams which have poured in upon the senator and upon the Republican state committee ever since the opening.

The effect of the Tomlinson hall speech of Sept. 27 has been to crystallize the sentiment for Beveridge and for the Republican ticket, among the independent voters. This is shown by the remarkable letter of Augustus Lynch Mason of Indianapolis, in which he comes out strongly for Beveridge. It also is indicated in the letter of John Overmeyer, another independent, living at North Vernon. Mr. Overmeyer says he has attended campaign openings for twenty-eight years in Indiana, and that the Beveridge meeting and the speech on that occasion surpassed anything he had ever seen or heard. The ovation to Beveridge and the enthusiasm for his cause have accompanied him on his tour from city to city throughout the state.

It had been predicted that the meetings in the early part of the speaking campaign would be lightly attended. The sowing of wheat and the cutting of corn are matters to be reckoned with, especially in preparing for afternoon meetings. The results of the Beveridge tour thus far have been to dissipate the fear that the crowds would not materialize. The attendance at the meetings has far exceeded expectations. The interest taken by the people has been much greater than was predicted. More than 2,000 people heard Senator Beveridge at Attica Wednesday. Lafayette turned out over 4,000. North Vernon showed up with a tremendous crowd, and Greensburg outdid her sister cities. Vevay and Batesville were out en masse.

The meetings have been attended by large numbers of Democrats and independents. Senator Moses E. Clapp of Minnesota has been talking to the people of Indiana, and has been telling them they ought to return Senator Beveridge. Senator Clapp has said without hesitation that Senator Beveridge is the real leader of the day in the national forward movement. At Logansport Senator Clapp was greeted by a large number of rural Democrats, and at one point in his speech they caused a demonstration by responding to a question that Senator Beveridge would never be defeated by their votes.

Some of the Democratic leaders have been saying that they would be able to judge of the drift after watching the Beveridge meetings for a few days. If they have followed the Republican rallies of the last week, the Democrats must have come to an unwelcome awakening on the subject of public drift.

Word comes to Indiana people that Colonel Roosevelt is to speak ten times in Indiana. He will stop at Covington, Crawfordsville and Veedersburg on the way to Indianapolis, will speak twice in Indianapolis, and also will speak at Anderson, Muncie, Richmond and one or two other places in Indiana. Republicans are jubilant over the prospect of the Roosevelt series of meetings. Since Teddy won such a signal victory in New York state and worked out harmony with such success for Empire state Republicans, he has become even more an asset for Republicans and a hero before the voters generally. It is expected that he will give the people just the sort of counsel they like best, and that his speeches will have great weight with all sorts of men. The Indiana Democrats held a session in this city this week to provide a line of defense or offense against Roosevelt. They were busy attacking Roosevelt for taking a part in New York politics, but when he won out over the bosses, the Indiana Democrats were put out very seriously. In fact, Indiana Democratic managers do not know at this time what to do to meet the Roosevelt issue as it is presented in Indiana by Roosevelt's coming Oct. 13.

Voted Against Strike.

London, Oct. 1.—The official announcement of the ballot taken by the South Wales miners on the question of a general strike in support of the Cambrian miners shows that the majority against the plan was 32,110. The South Wales miners will, however, attack the 12,000 Cambrian men who struck last month.

Cows Ate Dynamite.

Stamford, Conn., Oct. 1.—William Olmstead, a local milk producer, has lost four cows by dynamite and three or four others are recovering from an illness produced by the dynamite. The cows chewed several pounds of the dynamite and swallowed it.

The Democratic papers have had much to say of the contest in the New York Republican state convention in which the old time bosses were turned down and Col. Roosevelt was selected as temporary chairman by the delegates. This week the Democrats held their convention and the bosses were in absolute control. Murphy the head of Tammany Hall, dictated every action and nomination and the delegates were forced to wait for hours while he picked a man as nominee for governor. The New York Times Democratic, in its account of the convention said: "All day and night the Democratic leaders have been going hat in hand to Mr. Murphy and asking him humbly to favor this or that candidate."

Tammany in New York and Taggart in Indiana are still the supreme bosses and that affords no promise of reforms.

This is a good year for the voters to try a change of county government. The Republicans have nominated a county ticket made up of honest representative citizens and it is good business to elect them.

NEW RULES

Which Have Bearing on Teachers' Examination.

The state board of education has adopted a rule whereby a teacher seeking to teach only one subject in any of the high schools of the state will be required to take an examination in that high school subject only, in order to get a license for more than one year. Heretofore, when applicants took the examination in only one subject, they could obtain a license for year, whatever the general average. For a longer license, they were compelled to take examinations in four additional subjects.

By another rule adopted, applicants for primary teachers' license will be required to take examinations on four of the eight questions submitted in each of the lists for the common school licenses. Formerly, separate lists for applicants for primary licenses were provided, and the applicants were required to answer them only. The purpose is to show the school officials whether the primary teachers are generally prepared for school work.

New Superintendent of I. C. & S. Railroad Since The War.

Alexander Shane who resigned as chief inspector of the Indiana railroad commission to become general manager of the Indianapolis, Columbus and Southern Traction Company, begins his new work today. Mr. Shane has been engaged in railroad work since the close of the war. The Columbus Republican says:

Mr. Shane is a native of Louisiana. Since 1866 he has been engaged in constructing railway bridges and superintending railroads and since that year he has never been out of employment and never lost a pay day.

During 1866 and 1867 Mr. Shane was employed by the Louisville & Nashville railroad in repairing damage done to the road during the civil war. From 1868 to 1870 he was engaged in erecting a bridge over the Ohio river at Louisville for the Louisville Bridge & Iron Company. After this work was completed he became a foreman for the company and assisted in erecting bridges throughout the United States, remaining with the bridge company until 1880. In that year he accepted a position with the Keystone Bridge Company, of Pittsburg, as foreman of the erection of superstructures. In 1884 Mr. Shane became supervisor of bridges and buildings on the Chicago division of the Big Four and held the place until 1898, when he was appointed superintendent of the bridges and buildings of the Toledo, St. Louis & Western railroad. In 1902 he became superintendent of maintenance of way for the same company and remained with the company until June, 1907, when he went with the Indiana railroad commission. During his service with the railroad commission Mr. Shane helped formulate the code of rules for the use of interurban roads and he has also superintended much of the construction of electric roads in Indiana.

Capt. and Mrs. D. B. Vance, of Brownstown, who have been in Nebraska seven weeks, reached home today. During his absence Shannon Gray had charge of the light plant.

Treasure Trove

Its Secret Was Revealed by a Vision

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

REPU Jarvis journeyed from the little railroad station in a brightly painted stage
Carr. drawn by two iron gray horses. He Clerk was the only passenger for the beach,
town. and he shook about in the huge vehi-
Treasure like the proverbial pea in a barrel.
Sher At the entrance to a narrow sandy
Re lane shaded by wind blown cedars,
son. under which the marsh grass straggled
Co. sparsely, the stage stopped.
Creek "All out!" sang the driver lustily.
As: "Goin' to the beach, ye said?" He Sur peered down at Jarvis with beady
Cot black eyes beneath thatches of white
Rooge eyebrows.
Cor "Yes; Edgewater cottage. Straight bert ahead?" Jarvis asked the question while he threw his luggage to the ground and paid his fare.
Uz "Edgewater cottage? That'll be the Beve Rowe place, last cottage on the left.
Se So long!"
Dan "Much obliged. Goodbye!"
Ar Jarvis turned to the left and walked
Mun slowly down to the beach, his head
Tri bared to the fresh breeze, his lungs
Orles gratefully inhaling the invigorating
At salt air.
Craw The last cottage proved to be a rather St large structure placed not far be-
Terr were weather beaten to a silver gray,
S and the many windows tightly shut-
mo. tered looked like closed eyes in a sad
face. It seemed desolate enough com-tri pared to the other cozy houses along the beach, but Jarvis decided after a Bo. hasty examination that when he got Jud some porch furniture and opened the shutters the cottage he had Case. red would be fit enough for his pur-Wate. poses.
J. The rusty key, he had obtained from
on the agent creaked in the lock and the Ri door swung open, admitting him to
por large, comfortably furnished rooms.
His first duty was to throw wide the shutters and raise the window sashes Tha the fresh air. Except for a layer of ma dust over everything the house was in inc exquisite order of arrangement. He 14 decided to sleep in the wire inclosed balcony, and as he had arranged for off letter for his meals to be sent in from the hotel on the long point beyond
there was little for him to do save to arrange a cot in the balcony and unpack his painting things.
At sunset a steam launch from the hotel discharged a boy with a basket
Mr. containing his dinner. Jarvis discussed an excellent meal on the veranda, his
Mr. list's eye lingering on the wide
J. deep of green and blue flecked with
I. white that filled the foreground.
Mr. Here were color and life enough to
Mr. un any number of canvases. Jarvis
Mr. as glad he had decided to close his
Mr. radio and run away from all his
Mr. ends, and the chance that brought
Mr. to Beachside had been decided by childish method of closing his eyes
d running his finger along the map
New Jersey while he counted ten.
en he had opened his eyes and
Th Beachside, most inconspicuous
small watering places, under his pleas ger. Now he was here.
one He smoked a thoughtful cigar while
been sunset tints faded to opal and sil-
that and then a uniform slate gray set
is thi over the water.
to The cigar consumed, Jarvis felt for being other one in vain. His cigar case quies empty; also he had forgotten his Halle pacco pouch. He fingered his pipe nally fully and rummaged his traps for nacco of some sort. In sheer desation he carried his tallow candle ther was no kerosene in the cottage)
the room to room in an aimless
search for nicotine.
At last he whistled joyously. On a small stand in one corner of the living room he found a smoking set of hammered brass. The huge tobacco jar contained a few pinches of the desired
weed, and he crammed it into his pipe
gratefully.
Now he closed the door and locked it and went up to his balcony. He threw himself down on the cot and smoked contentedly, dreamily. Overhead was the shine of gentle stars, and on the beach the waves broke softly, musically. He went to sleep.
Jarvis was awakened by a crashing
rolley of thunder, followed by a vivid flash of lightning. He sat up and gazed open mouthed at the strange
scene depicted before his eyes.
There was all the wild fury of a hurricane bursting about his ears.
Tuge waves pounded on the beach,
paking in blinding spray that drenched his face. Some dark shape loomed
t of the blackness, coming nearer,
discerned the outlines of a large
lite steamer, saw dark forms tossed ainst her whiteness, heard the blare
her distress signals, saw her career
n the shoals and become engulfed in the sea. Still the waves broke on the beach, and in their tossing they flung dark form on the white sand beneath his balcony.
Jarvis tried to rise, but his limbs emed paralyzed. He endeavored to ter a sound, but his lips were dumb.
e could only sit there on his couch
ldly conscious of tragedy heaped on aged, powerless to help.
Another wave rose high crested,
rved downward and greedily snatch-
ed the still dark form from the sands.
ew it out into the sea's bosom and
ot it.

Horried, the painter stared down at the beach, now conscious that the silent form had left something behind, a small dark object whose outlines were lost in the darkness. Then the waves came again and again, sucking up the sand and piling it over and about the dark object until it was entirely hidden from view.

With appalling suddenness the storm
vanished as if it had never been. Overhead the stars shone gently, and the waves softly lapped the quiet beach.
Jarvis found his motive power as if magically restored. With a leap he was off the cot and dashing down the stairs to the sand. There he stood dumfounded.

To the touch of his stockinged feet
the sand was warm and dry. His groping fingers confirmed that fact.
The tide was rising, and almost to its verge the sand showed no trace of dampness. The sea stretched a level expanse, broken here and there by dimpling wavelets.

"It'll be hanged if I know what to make of it," muttered Jarvis dazedly.
"I couldn't have been dreaming, and yet"—He looked at his watch. "It's certainly up to me or the tobacco I've been smoking! Nine o'clock when I turned in, and now it's 9:30. Even in these swift times they don't turn storms off and on at that gait!"

Chagrined, he walked over to the place under his balcony where the waves had tossed the dead man for a brief instant before they reclaimed
him. Jarvis had watched it with his own eyes, and he had seen the following waves heap sand about a small,
dark object the man had left behind.
There should be a little sand mound
here—and there was!

The painter was too excited to return to his bed; therefore he went into the cottage, found an old fashioned lantern, in which he stuck a candle
end, took up a coal shovel and went back to the beach.

Here by the candle's dim light he grimly dug into the shallow heap of sand. It was a fool's business, he told himself as he delved downward to where the sand was soaking wet and the water oozed up into little wells and impeded his labor.

At last came rags and shreds of something that might have been an oil-
skin coat, and afterward, deeply embedded in the sand, Jarvis found a small water soaked box bound with iron bands. This was treasure trove.

Jarvis hastened to the cottage and with hammer and chisel pounded
away at the little box until its rotted sides fell inward and the iron bands
crumbled to rusty flakes.

Pitiful indeed was the little treasure
contained in the tiny chest—a sailor's keepsakes. Bits of coral and pretty shells and stones, a woman's lovely
face smiling from a tarnished frame,
a baby's first photograph, the mother's loving inscription penned on the back;
a few letters, intimately tender, from
wife to husband; a copy of a will, a few months' wages tied in little oilskin sacks, the owner's name on the inside of a memorandum book—James Petrel, master of the freighter Sea
Nymph—that was all.

So the man who had been thrown on the beach as revealed to Jarvis in the vision—for such the painter believed his strange adventure to be—must have been the captain of the ill fated vessel.
On the morrow he would inquire concerning the wreck of the Sea Nymph
and try to find the relatives of James Petrel.

After that Jarvis tumbled into bed
and went to sleep, wondering why he
of all men had been chosen to bring to light the long buried box. He dreamed about the curly headed baby, whose charming smile pursued him through his dreams.

"Yes," said the oldest cottager when Jarvis guardedly made inquiries concerning wrecks on the coast. "It was
as far back as 1885 that the Sea Nymph went ashore off here. She got on the shoals, but the seas were riding
so high she didn't stick. Back she went, and they simply swallowed her up, so the story goes. Bits of cargo floated ashore long afterward—one or two bodies of seamen. That was all.
Divers never found trace of her. It was the worst storm ever known on the coast. After that they built the breakwater and the lighthouse. At that time there was an old fisherman's
hut on the spot where your cottage
now stands. Tradition has it that the old man lured the steamer to her ruin.
If he did it was small profit to him,
for the storm washed his hut into the sea, and he went with it. The man who owns your cottage once found a copper canister filled with choice
smoking tobacco buried in the sand near by. It pleased him to resurrect
it and smoke it. He quit using it after awhile because, he claimed, it gave him the nightmare—said the Sea
Nymph went ashore every night in his dreams. If there's any of it left you better not smoke it," added the oldest cottager whimsically.

"It's all gone," replied Jarvis, with a cryptic smile.
And this is the treasure that Jarvis found. When he had traced the widow of the luckless Captain Petrel he found her prosperously married to one of the ship's owners, while the curly headed baby with the charming smile
had grown to be the loveliest girl Jarvis had ever met. As a consequence
Doris Petrel became the artist's wife.

In addition, the memory of the vision that had come to him that night
clung so persistently in his mind that he transferred the stormy scene to canvas with every detail of that wild
night of thunder and lightning, hurricane winds and mammoth waves, the ghostlike vessel shuddering to her watery grave, the package on the beach half obliterated by the sand. Next to Doris herself, this picture proved to be Jarvis' treasure, for it made his fortune.

TILE DRAINING A FIELD.

Importance of Paying Attention to All Details of the Work.

The first and most important consideration in the draining of any field is how to secure a proper outlet. This, if possible, should have a free outfall always above water and so protected as never to become obstructed. If the outlet is permitted to terminate beneath
water a certain section of the drain
must remain continuously full of water, and under these conditions
there is danger of silt depositing, closing the drain and rendering the whole system ineffective.

It should be so made as to be uninjured by freezing and not in danger of being clogged through the tramping of animals about it. Either sewer tile or vitrified drain tile, which will not be crumbled by the action of frost, should be laid for the first fifteen or twenty feet. If neither of these are available
the next best plan is to bed the ordinary tile in a good concrete to a depth of four or five inches and at the mouth
build up with the concrete a protecting face sufficient to prevent the caving of earth about the outlet. It is well,
too, to extend the concrete in a sloping apron two or three feet, on which
the water may spill without eroding.
Across the mouth of the tile there should be bedded in the concrete when it is laid a few vertical bars of half inch iron rod to prevent the entrance of animals. The outlet may discharge into a stream or lake or into an open ditch, but in whatever place there should be no possibility of it ever being more than temporarily under water
or otherwise obstructed.

Unless the fall for the drain can be very considerable its laying must be done with great care, the amount of care to secure perfectly uniform grade increasing the smaller the fall must be. To illustrate, in case the fall must

POOR WAY TO LAY TILE

be as little as an inch in a hundred feet it is clear that an error of three inches either up or down in the proper laying of the tile might cause water to stand to a sufficient depth in the tile
to practically fill one three inches in diameter, and this would cause the sitting up of the tile so as in time to render the section above the error in laying entirely inefficient.

When the tile has been brought finally into place great care should be taken to turn each piece until a close joint is secured on the top and as far as possible down the side and to see that it lies solidly upon its bed before any filling is placed over it. Enough earth should then be added to hold the tile firmly and prevent their becoming displaced when the final filling is done.
It is important that the filling or all
but the final leveling should be done
as early as practicable, as there is great danger from heavy rains washing soil into the drain through the joints when they are still loosely covered with only a foot or so of soil
above their tops.—American Agriculturist.

Orchard and Garden.

The really only successful garden is
the clean garden.

Good fruit and vegetables in clean,
attractive packages need no salesman.
If you have any San Jose scale spray
the trees this fall and again next spring.

It does not pay to plant crops in the peach orchard. Some people do it, but it is generally believed to be a bad
practice.

A covey of quail in an orchard will prove a good friend to the grower, because they eat a tremendous number of insects.

Carnations intended for winter
blooming should not be allowed to flower. Pinch off the buds as soon as they appear.

When doing the tree planting, do not forget to put a few trees in a corner of the pasture fields if there is such a thing as a fenced pasture on the farm.
Protect these for a few years and they will protect the stock for many more.

The city dealer profits by the laziness of the fruit grower by grading and repacking his badly
assorted product.

SAVE YOUR BARN TIMBERS.

Care and Attention Will Often Avert Need of Rebuilding.

A carpenter was telling me the other day that he knew of a barn which had been new silled three times in the space of sixteen years, says a correspondent of the American Cultivator.
Think of what a burden of work and expense that would be!

But that is what is going on all over the country every year. The sills, sleepers and posts of our barns rot
away, and we must replace them or let the buildings go down.

The trouble many times in such cases is that we have not provided air enough around our foundation timbers. Nothing rots timber like being shut away from the air.

Now, by putting here and there in the wall of our barns a small frame of plank, say, eight inches square and building the stones or cement about it
we have furnished opportunity for the air to get in and lengthen the life of our timbers. Over these squares we may tack a piece of wire cloth to keep out cats and other small animals.

Especially is some such thing needed
if the building is one in which we sometimes wash the wagons and carriages with a hose or with a pail of water and sponge. The water trickling down, added to the lack of ventilation, will soon cause the best of timbers to decay. In such cases there ought to be good drainage as well as an opening for the air to get in about the wood.

Some kinds of wood are more susceptible to decay than others. Of our native woods red beech, chestnut or oak is probably the best.

How many farmers know exact
name and variety of the corn they are growing?

Saves Time and Temper.

The annoyance and discomfort of having the cow switch her tail and liberally bespatter your face with mud
and fifth during the milking time can be avoided with the simple device
shown in illustration, which may be made with a piece
of wire and a pair of pinchers in a few moments. The wire is bent at the center into a spring coil, as shown at
b. The one end is then bent into a coil to furnish a hold for the fingers
c while adjusting the device to the tail above the brush. The opposite end is bent into a loop, as shown at a,
through which a string is tied, and the opposite end fastened to the stall,
away from the milker. This is easily and quickly placed and as easily released when through milking. The cow cannot strike the milker with her tail, thus throwing into the milk much filth and germs, so from a point of cleanliness as well as comfort it is of value.—Iowa Homestead.

The Dull Mowing Machine.

The mowing machine that chugs under ordinary conditions is sadly in need of attention. In nine cases out of ten the fault will be found in one or the other or both of the cutting edges.
The sickle may be dull or the edges worn off the ledger plates. It is only a half remedy to sharpen the sickle
and leave the dull ledger plates in.

AUTUMN CREED FOR FARMERS.

I believe in the sunflower and goldenrod. I believe in the broad fields of ripened clover. I believe in the grapes hanging purple beneath the broad leaved vines, in the rich red plums and the peaches'
tender blush. I believe in the roar of the corn binder, in the ripening
corn and in the fields heavy studded with the shocks. I believe in cutting corn until sure there is enough

Poultry Pointers.

Sell the young cockerels that are not needed for breeding stock and save
the food that they will consume.

Do not expect the hens that have been faithful layers during the summer to keep this up all winter. You may be disappointed if you do.

Fresh, pure drinking water frequently changed is indispensable to poultry health and comfort. The fowls do not enjoy stale drinking water any better than humans do.

Clover makes a splendid winter pasture for all kinds of fowls. Plant crimson clover in the orchard and let the fowls have access to it. It will build up the orchard soil and furnish nutritious feed for the fowls.

For an autumn and winter feed for poultry cabbage is well liked. This is hung up so the fowls can just reach
it. Large sugar beets are also good.
These are chopped up fine or cut open or sometimes crushed. Common field
turnips are also good.

If it is desired to fatten turkeys for market begin to increase the rations
gradually. Never attempt to fatten birds which in successive weightings
show a loss of weight. Overfeeding does not cause blackhead, but it does frequently cause the sudden death of birds in which blackhead is present.

More Than Enough is Too Much.

To maintain health, a mature man or woman needs just enough food to repair the waste and supply energy and body heat. The habitual consumption of more food than is necessary for these purposes is the prime cause of stomach troubles, rheumatism and disorders of the kidneys.
If troubled with indigestion, revise
your diet, let reason and not appetite control and take a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver
Tablets and you will soon be all right
again. For sale by Andrews-Schwenk

Surmounting a Crisis.

Edward Everett Hale used to tell
with a rueful smile a story of his boy-hood, when, like other boys, he occasionally mislaid some of his belongings. His gloves in particular had a strange way of disappearing one at a time. At last his mother, by way of assisting his memory, sent him out one day with a red cotton glove on one hand and a white glove on the other.
Even at this painful crisis, however,
his wits helped him.

"I held one hand in front of me and one behind my back," said Dr. Hale,
"and it seemed to me that people coming toward me would think I had on a pair of white gloves, while those behind would think I wore a pair of bright red ones."

An Omnivorous Insect.

There is in Egypt a little shaggy
black and tan insect about an eighth
of an inch long that eats almost everything under the sun. In most countries ivory brushes are pretty safe
from insects. In Egypt this little terror eats the ivory and eats the bristles. It eats your toothbrush and eats your toothpick. It eats the wool with which you are going to mend your husband's socks—the cards as well as the wool. It eats the handles off your knives and forks. It rejects nothing but glass and china and metal.—Stu-
den's "Egypt and the English."

It is in time of sudden mishap or accident that Chamberlain's Liniment
can be relied upon to take the place
of the family doctor, who cannot always be found at the moment. Then it is that Chamberlain's Liniment is never found wanting. In cases of sprains, cuts, wounds and bruises Chamberlain's Liniment takes out the soreness and drives away the pain.

An Eye Test.

Most people believe that they see the same with both eyes. That this is not the case one can easily convince himself by the following simple experiment: Cover one of the eyes with a hand or a bandage and let the experimenter attempt to snuff out a candle suddenly placed within a few feet of
him. He will almost invariably miss the flame, either overreaching, under-reaching or putting the fingers too far to the right or left of the flame. With both eyes normal and open the accommodation for distance and direction is instantaneous.

WORTH WEIGHT IN GOLD

Lady Learned About Cardui, The Woman's Tonic and is Now Enthusiastic in its Praise.

Mount Pleasant, Tenn.—"Cardui is all you claim for it, and more," writes Mrs. M. E. Rail, of this place.

"I was a great sufferer for 2 years and was very weak, but I learned about Cardui, and decided to try it. Now I am in perfect health.

"My daughter, when changing into womanhood, got in very bad health. I gave her Cardui and now she enjoys good health.

"Cardui is worth its weight in gold. I recommend it for young and old."

Being composed exclusively of harmless vegetable ingredients, with a mild and gentle medicinal action, Cardui is the best medicine for weak, sick girls and women.

It has no harsh, powerful, near-poisonous action, like some of the strong minerals and drugs, but helps nature to perform a cure in a natural easy way.

Try Cardui.

A Long Romance

It Ended Realistically In Wedlock

By RICHARD G. WHITE

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

An elderly gentleman sat on the broad piazza of a summer hotel overlooking the ocean. Beneath him the waves were curling in on the beach, casting a line of foam over the smooth sand, and receding with an effervescent sound. There may be people who can sit and watch this incessant rolling in and recession of waves with a stolid indifference. Not so George Warrington, whose spiritual part was made of finer stuff than that of the average man or woman. To him the billows told stories of infinity. More than that, they brought him memories. There was a tinge of sadness in it all, for he was alone in the world, without wife or child.

The waves were recalling to him a picture of his youth. He had seen it from a hotel window. The hour was between daylight and dark. Far out on the horizon a full moon was rising, a belt of cloud across its center. Nearer a black bulk was rising and falling monotonously. Nearer still lay a point of rocks. At low tide it was a little peninsula, at half tide an island embracing a few square yards, at full tide submerged. On its face, looking out upon and absorbed in the beautiful scene, sat a girl. Since she had gone there the sand behind her had been covered by the rising waters, and she was unconscious that her retreat over dry land had been cut off.

Quick thought shot through the brain of the young man looking out of the window. The tide his fancy transfigured to a savage in the wilderness with raised tomahawk stealing on his prey. Again it was a serpent encircling the girl and drawing its coils closer and closer about her. It was really an inanimate ocean unconsciously surrounding a girl unmindful of all save the beautiful scene before her.

In that region the tide runs with great rapidity. Warrington knew this, and, rushing down several flights of stairs, dashed over the sand toward the girl. As he ran he looked to see if a boat were lying anywhere near on the beach. None was in sight. Reaching the strip of water closing in behind the rock, he plunged in and swam across.

The girl's reverie was broken by looking up and seeing a dripping figure beside her.

"Come, quick! You're cut off by the tide."

Turning, she saw the swirling waters behind her. Her face lost its color, for she would be helpless in that quick current. She stood paralyzed.

"Come!" repeated Warrington. But he did not wait for her to move. Seizing her hand, he drew her, supporting her at the same time, to the margin of the torrent. She shrank back. Forcibly dragging her into it, encircling her with one arm, he swam with the other. The distance across the current was not long, but it ran so swiftly that the two were carried along till they found themselves at the end of the little strait, where they were tossed on the waves.

Then came a test of endurance. Warrington was strong and a good swimmer, but by this time the girl was clutching him so as to impede his efforts. At that hour few were on the beach and none within call. Warrington's efforts were having less and less effect, and he was about to give up hope both for himself and his burden when he heard the sound of oars. Making an effort, he got his head as far as possible above the surface and shouted: "Help!"

The sound of oars ceased, then recommenced with a quicker stroke, and in less than a minute the dark body of a boat appeared on the crest of a wave above the drowning couple. Then a hand was extended, and Warrington put out his own hand and grasped the gunwale of the boat. Between the newcomer and Warrington the drowning girl was got into the boat. Then Warrington was helped in by the boatman.

While Mr. Warrington was passing in memory over the scene that had occurred more than thirty years before a woman whose white hair contrasted with her comparatively young face came up and stood with her hands on the piazza rail, looking out upon the shimmer that was beginning to extend itself from the rising moon. She turned and was about to go away when she noticed the man sitting near her. There was something in his appearance, his wrapt attitude, to tell her that he, like herself, possessed the gift of appreciation of the beautiful. She felt impelled to address him.

"Isn't it charming?" she exclaimed, half to him.

"Say, rather, infinitely grand," he replied, rising and uncovering.

"We women are apt to see the beautiful, you men the grand," she continued. "A child once said, 'God is a beautiful painter.' While the statement places the lesser above the greater, it is still a beautifully expressed thought."

"Indeed it is. But the most absorbing effect of this scene to me is not that it is a picture, but a combination of infinite material forms. It is the wonder in it that impresses me."

The lady having assumed the privilege of her sex to first address the man, he assumed the privilege of proceeding further by asking her to be seated.

"This is the first time in years," she said, "that I have been to the seashore. I love it, yet I fear it. It is to me like the serpent that charms the bird to destroy it. Fancy this tranquil scene transformed by a tempest. There is nothing in nature that is to me so miraculous as those waves. See that leviathan out there rolling in. True, his mane is gilded by the moon, but his body is black. There is a terror in his very silence. There, it breaks! How it pounds the beach!"

"I dread the water in any form," she went on after a pause. "Even when it is tranquil it is treacherous. One who cannot swim may drown within a few feet of land. A current will glide along like a crawling reptile, carrying one who may be caught in it out into the great, dark, unmerciful ocean. Oh, I hate the water! I don't know why I came here. I will never come again."

"Madam," said Warrington, "you speak as one who has been caught in the toils of the watery element. You have had what swimmers call a scare. One who has suffered from a fright in the water will never get over it. Once conscious of its terrible grip, one can never be induced to trust it again."

"You are right," she said. "The relentlessness of any inanimate force is terrible, but it seems to me that the power of water is the most terrible of all. How can people cross and recross the ocean? It would seem that one ship being sucked down into the maw of the monster would be enough to deter others from trusting themselves upon its treacherous bosom."

Warrington was sure that the lady had experienced some mishap to give her this dread of the water and was curious to know the incident. But he was too well bred to ask a direct question. Moreover, it occurred to him that possibly it might have given her a mental as well as a physical shock from which she had never recovered.

"I have had," she went on, "what you call a scare. It gave me an incurable dread of water, but in itself it gradually passed into comparative unimportance. There was that connected with it which has affected my whole life."

"Indeed?"

The word "indeed" is an extremely well bred expression and means nothing. It doesn't trespass on any one's feelings, asks no questions, invites confidence only if the confider is minded to give it and leaves him or her to proceed or turn the subject at will. It is one of the most useful words in the English dictionary.

"When I was a girl I was sitting one evening on a rock viewing a scene like this, so enraptured that I was unconscious of the tide rising behind me. I was already cut off when a young man not only warned me, but saved me. Only a fortunate circumstance enabled us to get to the shore."

"Not for the world would I dwell on that occurrence. It is of what followed that I am going to speak. In novels when a young man saves a girl from a catastrophe they love and marry. In my case a romance was started that was continuous, leaving me with old age before me without a single companion. I could never forget my rescuer, but my rescuer apparently never considered me in any other light than as one he had rescued. At any rate, he never sought me out, never came near me. I had a number of excellent offers, but my mind had become absorbed with one person, and I would yield to none other. And here I am at nearly fifty years of age, desolate because a man saved me from drowning. I would prefer that he had left me to have been engulfed."

After this burst of confidence the lady suddenly remembered that she was giving it to a stranger. There was a momentary silence, at the end of which Warrington was about to speak, when she forestalled him.

"I dare say," she said, "that you are surprised at my revealing to one I have never met before so sacred an experience. Perhaps you will not believe me when I tell you that till this moment I have kept the secret in my own bosom from every living soul. When I came upon you just now this scene brought back the incident of my youth, and a certain kindness I saw in your eye invited me for once to open the floodgates and permit the long pent up waters to flow forth."

"Madam," said Warrington, "I am aware of that propensity engrained in humanity to confide. In this case you could not have confided in a person better calculated to console you. It is said that misery loves company. You and I, having been made miserable by the same incident, should love each other's company for the rest of our lives."

"Indeed," said the lady, in her turn using that convenient word.

"Thirty years ago I saved a girl from drowning. Unfortunately I was so cursed sensitive that I feared to make any advance whatever lest she should think I was presuming upon my service at having saved her. I did not see her again for some time after we left the water, and when I met her on her face was a scowl."

He paused, and the two regarded each other intently. Suddenly the lady burst forth reproachfully: "Why shouldn't she have scowled? Hadn't you ignored her?"

And so it was that a lady, not recognizing the man who had condemned her to spinsterhood, told him frankly the story of her life. It was the beginning of the end for both of them. A romance that had endured for thirty years was at last ended in realism—that is to say, marriage.

Capt. Bogardus Again Hits the Bull's Eye.

This world famous rifle shot who holds the championship record of 100 pigeons in 100 consecutive shots is living at Lincoln, Ill. Recently interviewed, he says: "I suffered a long time with kidney and bladder trouble and used several well known kidney medicines, all of which gave me no relief until I started taking Foley Kidney Pills. Before I used Foley Kidney Pills I had severe backaches and pains in my kidneys with suppression and a cloudy voiding. On arising in the morning I would get dull headaches. Now I have taken three bottles of Foley Kidney Pills and feel 100 per cent. better. I am never bothered with my kidneys or bladder and again feel like my own self." A. J. Pellens.

The Veiled Prophet.

The veiled prophet, Mokanna (Hakim Ben Allah), whom Tom Moore made the subject of his beautiful poem, was a real character and not a mere poetic fiction. Mokanna lived in the eighth century. Pretending to be an incarnation of God, he founded a sect in Khorassan which for a time was quite powerful. Rebelling against the caliph, he was for a time successful, but was subdued about 780, when he and the leading men under him took poison to escape the shame of a public execution.—New York American.

For More than Three Decades

Foley's Honey and Tar has been a household favorite for coughs, colds, and ailments of the throat, chest and lungs. Contains no opiates. A. J. Pellens.

When Pens Were First Used.

About the year 600 A. D. pens made of quills were introduced. This is shown by the fact that the word pen, a quill, is not found, it is claimed, in any work bearing an earlier date. Previous to that time the word calamus, signifying a reed, was exclusively employed as a designation for the vehicle used in transferring the ink to the parchment or other surface selected by the writers of that early age. Steel pens first came into use in 1803, and about twenty-two years later those composed of gold made their appearance.

Curious Apache Belief.

The Apache Indians' religious belief prevents them from committing murder in the dark. If a dozen Apaches should discover a man sleeping by his campfire at night so amount of money would hire them to attack him until the sun came up. They believe that if they kill a man at night their own souls will walk in eternal darkness forever. Knowing this curious superstition, hunters, scouts, trappers and others traveling through the Apache nation in the old days moved about during the night and lay by in some safe retreat during the day.

Good results always follow the use of Foley Kidney Pills. They contain just the ingredients necessary to tone, strengthen and regulate the kidneys and bladder and to cure backache. A. J. Pellens.

The Rule of Three.

Miss Tartun—Oh, yes, professor; I haven't forgotten that, I think. "Three is a crowd." That right?—Chicago Tribune.

Mr. Micklejohn

He Was a Fine Fellow and Served an Important Purpose

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Everard Tomlinson was considered an admirable catch. He was a fine fellow in every way and when he came of age fell heir to a fortune of some $600,000. He was besieged by fortune hunting girls.

It was something of a relief, therefore, when Mrs. Stetson, an old friend of his mother, reminded him that he was promised to her for a visit at her unpretentious bungalow on Lake Wasapogie for the last two weeks in September. He had engaged for this visit in the spring to please his mother and before he had made his round of house parties. At that time he looked forward to two weeks in Mrs. Stetson's bungalow as burying himself in the woods. There was to be no other guest, and the family consisted only of Mrs. Stetson, her son, Roy, aged sixteen, and her daughter, Alice, aged twenty. Tomlinson was told that it would not be necessary to bring evening dress; that he would need flannel shirts and any old clothes he might possess. His days would be passed in a rowboat and his evenings in the living room of the bungalow with the family sitting around a table reading by a kerosene lamp.

After being hunted by spinsters Tomlinson rather liked the idea of getting away by himself. True, there was Alice Stetson, who might be lying in wait for him, but it was not improbable that he could get away occasionally alone for a pull over the waters of the lake.

It was near the 1st of October when Tomlinson was driven up to the rear door of the bungalow—the house faced the lake and was built on its verge—and the foliage had already begun to take on its variegated hues. Mrs. Stetson and Roy welcomed the guest. Tomlinson noticed the absence of Miss Alice and was so well bred as to say that he hoped she was not from home. He was told that she was in the house, but would not appear before dinner. Her mother vaguely hinted that there was a reason for her keeping her room for the present, and from the sympathetic tone in which the statement was made Tomlinson inferred that some sad event had occurred.

Alice came out of her room as dinner was announced. She did not say anything about the lugubrious event, but she looked intensely sad. Indeed, her eyes were red, an evidence that she had been weeping. The effort she made to seem cheerful was touching. Tomlinson was tempted to inquire what was the cause of her melancholy, but was too well bred to trespass on the sacred feelings of a young girl. Alice retired to her room early in the evening.

The next morning her depression continued, though Tomlinson noticed that she ate heartily. Mrs. Stetson suggested that she show Tomlinson the beauties of Wassapogie lake. Alice cast a look of appeal at her mother, as much as to say, "It's cruel that I must exert myself to entertain a stranger when my heart is crushed," but the mother insisted, telling her daughter that the fresh air would raise her spirits and that she should make an effort.

What kind of an effort she should make the mother did not explain. Roy got out a boat, and as Alice stepped into it dressed in a very becoming blouse and a short skirt Tomlinson noticed that she possessed a foot and ankle the curves of which were very delicately turned. She asked Roy if he was not going with them, and when he said he was going instead for ducks she gave him a reproachful glance. Tomlinson, relieved at Roy's refusal, took the oars and pulled away from the front porch, which served as a landing for the little bungalow buried under trees and shrubbery, dipping his oars into water lilies, then gliding away into deep water.

There was an autumn crispness in the air, and Tomlinson wished the lady were in a better condition to enjoy it with him. He drew her into conversation and soon learned the cause of her distress. When he admired a clump of trees on the crest of a knoll she said, "Mr. Micklejohn always admired that." When he pulled into a little cove with a tiny beach overhung with wildwood and remarked what a charming spot it was she replied sadly, "Mr. Micklejohn and I always used to pull in here when we came out boating."

"May I ask who Mr. Micklejohn is?"

"Oh!" This was an exclamation as though she had unwittingly betrayed herself. "Mr. Micklejohn is a very good friend of ours. He left us yesterday morning just before you came."

It was all out. This bee Micklejohn had been there, had captured the prize and there was no sweetness left for poor Tomlinson.

"Pardon me," he said, with a suspicion of hauteur. "I did not know that I was trespassing on sacred ground."

"Oh, no. I assure you you quite mistake me."

"In what respect?"

"It's as I said. Mr. Micklejohn is a very good friend to us all—mother, Roy, all of us."

"But when he goes away you do the mourning."

She looked very much hurt at this, almost offended.

Tomlinson was disgruntled. Notwithstanding that this was very different from the social life he had been enjoying he would have liked the change, especially for the company of this pretty girl, had not Micklejohn spoiled it all by going away, taking her heart with him. With the girls Tomlinson had met he was surfeited. Here was a girl so preoccupied with another that she couldn't even be companionable. This is a specimen of the way she talked about Micklejohn:

"Do you sing? No! Mr. Micklejohn has such a lovely tenor voice. When he sings he thrills me. He used to sing parts from 'Faust,' and I almost wished I had been Marguerite. Mr. Micklejohn is very versatile. He is the best whist player, the best billiard player, the best horseback rider, the best swimmer—"

"Did you tumble out of the boat when he was here that he might swim ashore with you?"

"How ridiculous!" She pouted. Tomlinson asked her to go on with the catalogue of Micklejohn's accomplishments, but she turned away from him as from one who had slapped the face of her idol and, pulling on the port rudder rope, headed the boat for the bungalow.

After dinner Alice sat at the table in the living room with her mother, her brother and Tomlinson—that is to say, she was going to sit there, but the guest spoiled it all and drove her away by asking if Mr. Micklejohn read poetry to her by the dim light of the kerosene lamp. At this reference to the dear departed Micklejohn Mrs. Stetson cast a frightened glance at her daughter. Roy was reading a book on the game of football and was oblivious to the shock to his sister's sensibilities. Alice arose and, with her eyes bent to the floor, left the room. Tomlinson could have bitten off his tongue, for a long evening was before him with no other companions than an elderly lady and a boy, the room in which they were being lighted by a dim lamp. Mrs. Stetson retired at 9 and Roy half an hour later. Tomlinson vowed that if the period of this seclusion ever expired—it seemed to him that it never would—he would not get into such a trap again. Besides, he was much pliqued after having been sought by finer girls to be completely ignored, considered a personage of no importance whatever compared with the immaculate Micklejohn. A desire came to him to supplant Mr. Micklejohn and when he had done so leave Lake Wassapogie with his nose in the air.

The next morning Mrs. Stetson, evidently still concerned about her daughter's sorrow, suggested another boat ride. Alice didn't seem to care what she did so long as Mr. Micklejohn was absent. She yielded possibly to her mother's wish. The boat was taken out, and the guest of the house, with the listless girl, again left the bungalow.

Tomlinson bore the references to Micklejohn, gritting his teeth, but making no reply. His object was rather to draw Alice's attention away from this remarkable man to other subjects from which he might the more easily direct it to himself. He exerted whatever lady killing faculties he possessed for an hour, at the end of which time his companion seemed really to have plucked up some interest in her surroundings. Then for an hour she failed to mention the lost one. Tomlinson was encouraged.

Two weeks passed, each day being a gradual drawing away of Alice Stetson from a man who was absent to a man who was present. All the delicious little nooks which bordered on the lake were visited again and again, and at last Tomlinson chuckled to himself:

"Now bring on your Micklejohn."

One bright morning they were drifting idly through some rushes. There's nothing like some rushes, some smooth water, a little brush and a few overhanging trees, with a man and a girl in a boat, to make a picture of young love. Tomlinson was making an effort to complete the shattering of the sacred image—Micklejohn. He overshoot the mark and made use of the word "love." Had Miss Stetson been sitting at the other end of the boat from him, possibly what happened might not have happened, at least not then. But they were sitting side by side. Alice's head fell on Tomlinson's shoulder. What could he do? He completed the transition. The burden was removed from the shoulders of the dear departed and placed upon those of the newcomer.

This is a letter written by Alice Stetson to her bosom friend Molly Bawn announcing her engagement:

"You see, dearest, mamma knew from Mrs. Tomlinson that Ned was beset by a lot of society girls of that class which is trying to live in swell-dom without having the means to do so. Mrs. Tomlinson was afraid some of them would get him and, knowing what a plain, modest, unassuming girl I am, without a bit of deception in my nature, she asked mamma to invite Ned here, hoping he and I might make a match. Mamma said he wouldn't 'look at' me after all the fine ladies he had met. This set me to thinking, and I determined to be as unlike them as possible. When he came I pretended to have just parted with somebody else—a Mr. Micklejohn. I called him—talking about what a fine fellow he was, how I missed him, and all that, till Ned got so mad every time I mentioned his name that I thought he would murder me. Now I'm afraid he'll murder me when he finds out that Mr. Micklejohn is a myth."

"We're going to be married during the holidays, and I wish you to be my first bridesmaid. We're not going to have a splurge wedding, but quite gay enough to warrant the prettiest gown you can invent."

The affidavit for a change of venue from the regular judge was filed by the defendants in the action.

BUT ONE BALLOT WAS REQUIRED

New York Democrats Name Ticket at Midnight.

CHAIRMAN DIX FOR GOVERNOR

Congressman Sulzer's Name Was Also Presented to the Convention For Head of Ticket, but He Got Only 16 Votes, the Balance of the Ticket Being Named by Acclamation—Platform Evoked Cheers From Delegates.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 1.—The following ticket was nominated last night by the Democratic state convention:

For governor, John A. Dix, Albany; lieutenant governor, Thomas F. Conway, Clinton; secretary of state, Edward Lazansky, Kings; comptroller, William Sohmer, New York; state engineer, John A. Bensen, New York; treasurer, John J. Kennedy, Erie; attorney general, Thomas F. Carmody, Yates; associate justice court of appeals, Frederick K. Collins, Chemung.

The whole ticket, save governor was named by acclamation. At 11:20 the balloting for governor began. It was soon seen that Dix would easily be the nominee of the convention. When the vote was announced by the chair Dix was found to have received 434 votes to William Sulzer's 16. John A. Dix, who is chairman of the state committee, is a paper manufacturer and banker of Washington and Albany. He was born at Glen Falls in 1860 and went from the local academy to Cornell, entering the class of 1883. He left college at the end of his junior year and went into business.

The Platform.

The platform of principles on which the party is to stand contains a rebuke for attacks on the supreme court; no federal absorption of states' rights; no new nationalism, but the old nationalism built on the constitution of the United States; the largest possible measure of home rule for cities; a scathing denunciation of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law as a betrayal of the people and a burden on the average man; an accusation of gross extravagance on the part of the Republicans and a promise of retrenchment with reform and economy if the Democrats take control of the government of the state; a promise of an unwhitewashed investigation by a Democratic governor and legislature of legislative corruption; an out-and-out declaration in favor of state-wide direct nominations with personal enrollment; a declaration for an appropriation to make the corrupt practices law effective; a declaration for election of United States senators by the popular vote; the income tax, extension of the parcels post so that packages of increased size may be handled through the mails; real conservation; regulation of public service corporations; legislation to protect farmers and consumers and to give better roads; elimination of grade crossings; an employers' liability act; a restriction of child labor; full protection everywhere to all American citizens without regard to race, creed or color; the merit system in the public service, extension of the means to eradicate tuberculosis, and a final declaration against new nationalism. The chairman of the platform committee was asked to read this paragraph over and over again while the delegates cheered. Edward M. Shepard wrote the paragraph and he made it strong. It is as follows:

"We solemnly declare our inflexible opposition to the so-called 'new nationalism.' Its inventors put this forward as if it were progress, while in reality it is sheer reaction to tyrannical methods long ago shaken off by the free peoples of the world, oftentimes at cruel cost in treasure and blood. The settlers of our country fled from Europe to escape it. What ever advance its adoption would bring is an advance toward socialism. They would have us abandon freedom. They would reduce the states to prefectures governed from Washington. They would clothe the president with power to declare what is lawful—a power usurped by one president in the case of a giant corporation absorbing a competitor. Such a new nationalism would lay the meddling hand of a bureaucracy upon every industry, increasing the burdens of taxation, making the struggle for life still harder and compelling every American workman to carry on his back a federal inspector.

"Against all this exaltation of federal centralized power to the destruction of home rule; against this despair of representative government; against the contemptuous impatience of the restraints of the law, and of the decisions of the courts, we contend, in supreme confidence that the people of this state and of this nation will not forget the noble heritage of their past, but upon that foundation will be built the still nobler progress of their future."

Burn the Smoke

When air strikes fire through the grate a heavy black or yellow smoke is formed. This air is combustible, but no amount of air, passed through the ashpit, will burn it. "Air Blast," "Hot Blast," and "Gas Burner" are three ways of naming the same process, which is to bring the heated air over the surface of the fire to meet with these gases. They ignite at once leaving only a thin gray smoke which is hardly perceptible.

LORIMER HELD OUT A PROMISE

How One Legislator Was Influenced In His Vote.

POSTMASTERSHIP INVOLVED

Representative Shepard of Jerseyville Tells How He Was Personally Approached by Expectant Statesman With a "Substantial Consideration" in Return For His Vote For Senator—Link Admits He Perjured Himself.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—That William Lorimer personally offered a "substantial consideration" for a legislator's vote in behalf of himself as a candidate for United States senator was the sworn statement made before the senatorial investigating committee by Henry A. Shepard, Democratic member of the legislature from Jerseyville. Shepard told the senators that Lorimer met him in an ante-room of the state capitol at Springfield on the day that the bi-partisan alliance piled up 103 Lorimer votes, and promised to appoint anyone that Shepard might name as postmaster at Jerseyville. The prosecution declared that Shepard's testimony showed that Lorimer had an intimate personal knowledge of the alleged plot to purchase his election by rewarding members of the legislature who voted for him. A sensation was caused at the inquiry when Representative Michael S. Link admitted under pressure that he had perjured himself before the Cook county grand jury in relating details of his receiving $1,000 of the so-called Lorimer money. The admission came as a bombshell in the camp of the defense of Senator Lorimer, which was thought to have scored a triumph in evidence given by Link during a three-hours' examination attacking State's Attorney Waymen and his assistants, in which Link said he had been put through the "third degree" and urged to tell "lies," under promise of having the perjury indictment against him quashed.

REGISTRAR RESIGNS

Tennessee Negro's Name Will Take Place of Vernon's on Bills.

Washington, Oct. 1.—There will shortly be a new name on the paper currency. William T. Vernon of Kansas, registrar of the treasury, tendered his resignation, and will be succeeded in office before long by J. C. Napier of Nashville, Tenn. The retiring officer and his successor are colored men. The office of registrar of the treasury under several administrations has been held to be a bit of patronage exclusively for the colored politician. Many years ago it was held by ex-Senator Blanche K. Bruce of Mississippi. Under President Cleveland's first administration General W. S. Rosecrans, a retired army officer, was appointed. Under President Cleveland's second administration, another white man was given the office, J. Fount Tillman of Tennessee. President McKinley appointed Judson C. Lyons, a colored Republican from Georgia, and President Roosevelt William T. Vernon of Kansas, colored, to succeed Lyons.

TAKING NO CHANCES

Our Troops in Philippines Ready to Go to China in a Hurry.

Manila, Oct. 1.—Acting under orders lately received here from Washington, the military authorities are quietly assembling supplies and arranging the transportation for approximately 5,000 troops in readiness for their embarkation to China. It is stated that the situation in that country is causing much uneasiness owing to the recrudescence of anti-foreign sentiment, which threatens another outbreak similar to the boxer rebellion.

Poison Was in Children's Reach.

Covington, Ky., Oct. 1.—While "playing doctor" two children of Thomas Cobb swallowed carbolic acid and died immediately after. They were brother and sister, aged five and seven years, respectively.

May Enjoin Hitchcock.

Washington, Oct. 1.—The representatives of several publishing concerns are talking of asking for an injunction restraining Postmaster General Hitchcock from using any of the money appropriated under the last postal bill for the printing of return addresses on stamped envelopes.
